Factual Account:

I lived at No. 1 Hua-Sin-Hsiang, Shanghai Road (in the Refugees' Zone) in 1937. At about 11 a.m., 16 December of that year, I was arrested by Japanese soldiers (presumably of the NAKASHIMA Unit). Arrested at the same time were my elder brother, Teh Jen, formerly secretary at Kiashang Airfield Station, my cousin Teh Kin, formerly in silk trade, and five other neighbors whose names were unknown to me. Each two of us were bound together by a rope fastening our hands, and sent to Shiakwan, on the bank of the Yangtze River. More than 1,000 male civilians were there and were all ordered to sit down, facing more than ten machine-guns about 40 or 50 yards in front of us. We sat there for more than an hour. At about 4 o'clock, a Japanese Army Officer came by motor car, and he ordered the Japanese soldiers to start machine-gunning us.

We were ordered to stand up before they did the shooting. I slumped to the ground just before firing started, and immediately I was covered with corpses and fainted.

After approximately 9 p.m., I climbed out from the piles of corpses and managed to escape and go back to my house.
